

We Made It to Florence

Overnight from Chicago, a taxi from FLR, and the best carbonara we've ever had

DJG

2026-06-06

Table of contents

After flying all night from Chicago and connecting through Frankfurt, we arrived in Florence right on the planned 6:30 PM local arrival. The long-haul exhaustion was real, but so was the relief of finally being in Italy.

From Florence Airport we took a taxi into the city to the Airbnb at Aurora apartments Piazzetta, Via Por Santa Maria, 8 — a central landing point just steps from the old heart of Florence. Bags down, travel day behind us, the first evening could begin properly.

Dinner was at Mangiafoco Osteria Tartuferia, which turned out to be exactly the right first-night choice: excellent food, an extensive wine list, and the sort of meal that makes arrival feel official. The carbonara was the best carbonara ever; the steak was remarkable. After a night in the air and a day of airport logistics, it was a perfect way to spend the first evening in Florence.