Florence is apparently one of the best cities in the world for stationery — not office supplies, but the real stuff: hand-marbled paper, leather-bound journals, fountain pens, bookbinding workshops that have been doing it the same way for centuries. We're staying near the Duomo next week, so I did some research on where to go. There's a natural walking route that takes you from the center across the Ponte Vecchio, which is convenient.

Closest to the Duomo / Piazza della Signoria

Il Papiro The classic Florence stationery stop. Famous for hand-marbled paper, journals, and traditional Florentine craftsmanship. This is the one everyone mentions first.

Visconti Flagship Store Florence's renowned fountain pen maker. Worth browsing even if you're not in the market for a pen.

Eredi Paperone Bottega d'Arte Near Piazza della Signoria. Beautiful papers, notebooks, and artistic paper goods.

Moleskine Store — via degli Speciali Convenient if you want a travel journal without venturing far from the center. Less artisan, more practical.

For Handmade Florentine Craftsmanship

Riccardo Luci Marbled Paper Family bookbinding and marbled-paper workshop where many items are still handmade using traditional techniques. This one sounds like it could eat an hour easily.

Alberto Cozzi Rilegatore Firenze One of Florence's classic bookbinding and paper ateliers. Known for leather-bound journals and marbled papers.

Il Papiro (Oltrarno location) The Oltrarno branch is worth a stop if you're crossing the river toward the Pitti Palace anyway.

For Fountain Pens

Casa della Stilografica SRL One of Italy's best pen shops — fountain pens, inks, notebooks, accessories. Pen enthusiasts apparently make special trips here. I may be one of them.

Suggested Walking Route

Starting at the Duomo:

1. Il Papiro
2. Walk to Piazza della Signoria → Eredi Paperone Bottega d'Arte
3. Continue to Visconti Flagship Store
4. Cross the Ponte Vecchio and finish at Riccardo Luci Marbled Paper and Alberto Cozzi Rilegatore Firenze

If I had to pick three priorities: Il Papiro, Riccardo Luci, and Casa della Stilografica. Those are the ones most likely to produce something I'll still be using years after the trip.
